IEPA expanding Jennison cleanup

Staff writer

Sometimes Murphy's Law — which says that anything that can go wrong will — doesn't apply. Unexpected low costs associated with the Illinois Environmental Protection Agency's cleanup of the contaminated former Jennison. Wright facility in West Graite have allowed the agency to perform more work than it had initially expected.

A $2 million, limited removal of most hazardous waste been Nov. 7 as a pilot project with funding from the U.S. EPA under the new Superfund Accelerated Cleanup Model (SACM) program.

Fred Nika, remedial project manager, said last week that IEPA was able to dispose of much of the hazardous materials (which contain benzene, arsenic, dioxin, mercury, PCP, furans and other carcinogens) much more inexpensively than had been projected.

Because some of the material contained dioxin, Because some of the material contained dioxin, The contained dioxin, the contained dioxin, and to have it hauled to an incinerator in Caffeyville, Kan. But a hazardous waste landfill in Indiana agreed to accept the material, greatly reducing costs, Nika said.

"We were able to save money over our initial estimate and convinced U.S. EPA to put (addition-less than the containing contaminated material estimate and convinced U.S. EPA to put (addition-less than the containing contaminated material (See CLEANUP, Page 5A)

Garbage collection in Venice spurs complaints

By Scott Cousins Staff writer

Venice Alderman John Ervin says he will look into complaints that city garbage collectors were not doing their jobs. Aldermen fielded several complaints and questions about garbage collection at Tuesday's meeting questions about garrage conection at Tuesday's leaves to the council's streets and Ervin is chairman of the council's streets and alleys committee, and said most residents should have trash collected once per week. Resident John Love said workers were much slower than that, and also were uncooperative. Love said he had called "every day" for two weeks for workers to pick up trash at his sister's house He also said when he called to ask for a trash pick-up at his church, workers were uncooperative.

"They asked what they feeding over at the church today." Love said. "That was their response, like if there is nothing good over there they are not going to come they're not doing what they are supposed to be doing." he said.

Love said he followed garbage collectors one day and they did very little work.
"Two city workers who should have been picking up garbage rode up and down Broadway all day people are tired of hearing excuses when they see city workers who should have been picking up garbage rode up and down Broadway all day people are tired of hearing excuses when they see city workers doing nothing."

City Treasurer J. Alan Gardner said he also had similar problems with garbage collection.

On Saturday, he and a neighbor were cleaning up, and Gardner said he asked a worker if he could empty a trash barrel.

The worker replied that he would not, and Gardner said used profamon to the city "he said." This is a but reflection on the city "he said." This is a but reflection on the city "he said." "periodically" and he would talk to Street Superintendent Green Jacks about the problems. "That will be taken care of," he said. Ervin also added that sometimes workers will not pick up improperly bagged garbage, and that into barrels or bags.

Consumers are being introduced to the new beer through an acceptance of the new beer through an expension, radio authorized in print created by BBDO Toronto. The advertising asks "Are you going to like Red Dog? Hey, it's your call."

In addition, beer drinkers are noticing the sayings under the bottle cap. These sayings, such as "This dog won't bite," and "Why are you reading this?" are just for fun and reflect the attitude of the beer.

Red Dog is the second new-product entry for the Plank Road Brewery, which launched ice brewed ICEHOUSE in 1993. The name of the brewery reflects the heritage of Miller's original 1855 location on the old Plank Road in Milwaukee.

Blues' support means to us."
With the opening of Kiel Center this winter, the Mid-States Championship Night has a new home. Hoy hopes the new building houses as many memorable moments as did The Arena.
"Til miss the old barn. There was nothing like it for a hockey game — the noise, the atmosphere," Hoy said. "I hope people show up Tuesday night ready to blow the roof oft." But regardless of the site, working with friends such as Mathieu and her staff. Roger Dixon, former Arean maeser than a contract of the state of the state who lend their services for free; and the many electricians whose work keeps the event humming, make Championship Night special for Hoy such a pleasure to work with all these people. There's no way we could do this will be the service of the work with all these people. "Mid-States is really lucky to have friends like them."
